FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

KISH WELCOMES EXECUTIVE VICE PRESIDENT AND CHIEF FINANCIAL OFFICER J. BRADLEY SCOVILL

STATE COLLEGE PA – November 16 – William P. Hayes, President and Chief Executive Officer of Kish Bank and its parent company, Kish Bancorp, is pleased to announce the addition of J. Bradley Scovill, Executive Vice President and Chief Financial Officer of Kish Bank and Kish Bancorp.

As Chief Financial Officer, Scovill will be responsible for planning, organizing and managing the financial performance of the bank, holding company and all non-banking affiliates; the management of franchise growth through expansion, acquisitions and partnerships; and leadership in the development and execution of corporate strategy and the achievement of organizational objectives. He will also be responsible for capital planning and investor relations and will direct the preparation of financial and regulatory reports. In addition, Scovill will oversee various corporate and risk management activities of the bank and holding company. He will serve as a member of the Office of the President and Senior Executive Team. Scovill's primary office will be located at Kish Bank's State College Financial Center.

Prior to joining Kish, Scovill was an executive vice president of PNC Bank, a position which he held since PNC acquired Sterling Financial Corporation of Lancaster in early 2008. At the time of its acquisition, Sterling had $3.2 billion in banking assets and $2.7 billion in assets under management. During his 2000 to 2008 tenure with Sterling, Scovill served as senior executive vice president with a series of responsibilities, most recently as chief revenue officer, responsible for all Sterling operating units, including banking, leasing, specialty finance, wealth and investment management, brokerage and insurance. Previous to that he was senior executive vice president, financial service group, and before that, senior executive vice president, chief financial officer.

From 1994 to 2002, Scovill was president and chief executive officer of Bank of Hanover in Hanover, PA, prior to and following its acquisition by Sterling Financial. Between 1991 and 1994, he was the chief financial officer of Bank of Hanover. During the period 1981 to 1991, he provided financial, strategic planning, and credit quality consulting services with L. R. Webber Associates.

Scovill is a 1981 finance graduate of Penn State University where he was a three-year letterman on the football team. He has been active in community organizations including United Way, the Chamber of Commerce, economic development organizations, the Fulton Opera House, and the Hanover Public Library. Professional volunteer activities include the Pennsylvania Bankers Association, the Smeal College of Business at Penn State, and Financial Executives International.

Scovill and his wife Joanne will reside in State College. They have two adult children, a son Clay and daughter Marissa.
